

In brief, I consider myself a citizen first and consumer second. I am very concerned that the FCC's plan will cause further erosion in the needs of this democracy. Essentially, it is the threats to unbiased news information and multiple view points that worries me most. In light of the obvious problems that have been created by the Telecom Act of 1996, I think it's extremely hasty to move forward on further media deregulation without first understanding the impact of such a decision. Of course it is impossible to debate this issue thoroughly without the plan being made public. With all due respect, I feel that your efforts to rush this agenda through, is contrary to the public's interest and will lead to serious consequences in the near future. Please reconsider the vote for June 2 and give this issue the important public debate it deserves. Thank you.
